New Brownie Troop defies rain and wind and sells all their Girl Scout Cookies

Carmel's brand new Girl Scout Brownie Troop #2041 headed to the Rio Road Post Office on Saturday with four cases of Girl Scout cookies. They were ready for a long, tough day in the rain to earn a paltry percentage of the gross sales. Most of the money goes to the national organization.

Along with troop leaders Kim O'Conner, Leslie Fields and Charlene Victory; seven of the sixteen members of Troop 2041, Sarah Victory, Helen Cosentino, Kristen Booth, Lindsay Field, Ashley Silva, Madeline Aiello, Aislin O'Conner and Katherine Simmons came to charm and hustle to sell cookies.

They smiled and opened doors for the sparse string of postal patrons.

By noon they had sold every single box and let out a cheer, vowing to sell more cookies next year.

Trail and Saddle Club holds annual Valley Event

There will be a free clinic at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club, 85 E. Garzas Road, Carmel Valley, on Saturday, March 9, 1996 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This clinic is for beginners. All ages are welcome to participate or watch. However, children must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Participants must bring their own horses and rope. If your horse doesn't rope, there will be help for you to teach it.

Space is limited, so register in advance at the Farm Center Store or call 624-4737. Lunch, prepared by Jerry and Judy Hecker, may be purchased at the Snack Bar.

The clinic, which will be taught by Jim Phiefer, Ron Buita, Leo Berta, Jack Belangee, Scott Wilkerson, Kini

Nunez, Dave Gonzales, Gregg Melloway and Gary Paddock, is sponsored by Carmel Valley Ranchers' Days and Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Educational Alliance, Inc.

Local residents receive awards for work with Hospice

Hospice of the Central Coast recognized extraordinary contributions to the Hospice program, during the annual meeting of Friends of the Hospice of the Central Coast on February 23, at the Inn at Spanish Bay.

The first Helen Westland Award was presented to Mrs. Helen Westland, Pebble Beach, chair of Hospice's Development Committee.

The Kendall Award, named for long time Hospice Board member and supporter George Pendleton Kendall and his wife, Betty, was presented to William Smith, Marina, Director of Engineering for Hospice House, by board member Jo Barton, Big Sur.

CVPOA forum covers the 5th's candidates

Questions & Answers

By Elizabeth Cowley

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (CVPOA) held a forum for the three candidates for 5th District Supervisor on February 15. The candidates, Zan Henson, Jeff Davi and Dave Potter responded to questions prepared by the CVPOA and then answered a few questions from the audience.

WHERE DO THEY STAND?

Incorporate Carmel Valley?

DAVI: Davi said incorporating would be very expensive and change the unique character of the Valley.

POTTER: "First thing it does is impose a tax to keep the bureaucracy going."

HENSON: "The costs are just enormous. Property taxes would skyrocket."

Campaign Reform

HENSON: "I am going to lead by doing and limit my contributions to $100." Henson added that if he is elected he will have proven to the Supervisors that capping campaign spending does work.

DAVI: "I am afraid to tell you, it won't work." Davi said he supports campaign reform only if it is tied to term limits.

POTTER: "To set a cap in this district would set a cap for other communities to follow."

What do you think about the Rancho San Carlos approval?

BIRTHS

Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula announced the following births:

Aaron Martin Dally, a boy, born to David and Margie Dally of Carmel, on February 8, 1996.

Alexis Lorin Davi, a girl, born to Jeff and Kelly Davi of Pebble Beach, on February 16, 1996.

A PLACE IN THE SUN

Virginia Parke

This story is about names. Names of people who believe in translating the concepts of giving and community spirit into action.

It is the names of those who contributed time and materials to the Carmel Valley Branch Library benefit the 2nd Annual "Night at the Old Buckeye". The order has little rhyme or reason, it is simply an acknowledgment of the many businesses and individuals who are willing to support their community. This list does not contain the names of all who also provided support by attending.

Members of the organizing committee were: Susan McDonald,

Barry Harrow, Dorothy McEwen, Konny Gloy, Lori Kline, Mary Sequig, Kathy Nielsen, Doug Pease, Virginia Parke, Nina Laub, Kay Kirkland, Michael Kucher, Chuck Woodson and Neta Cobb.

Nan Heflin along with Michael McCombs, John Stanley and Bruce Owen opened the musical festivities. Versatile jazz great Stu Heydon with his Blues Persuaders Donny Abrams on the keyboard, Joe Wedlake on the drums and Pete Rose on bass carried on to the delight of listeners and dancers.

Members of the Jamesburg Volunteer Fire Department Juan Lopez, Ron Trout, Steve Moore and Nanse Browne ran the parking operation with their usual efficiency.

Susan Wallace and Victoria Rugg, Carmel Valley Business Service, Letter Perfect Typing & Word Processing contributed to the PR activities. Gerry Foote, Laurie Bayless, Lisa Thompson, Reily and Marie Wilson worked on the clean-up detail.

Contributing to the buffet banquet were: A Country Place, A Moveable

Feast, Jonna Ball, Daniel Barduzzi, Baum & Blume, Bernadus Vineyards, Leo Berta, Bon Appetite, Carmel Valley Fire Department, Carmel Valley Market, Chris Cayce, Chateau Julien, Deli Treasurers, Jim Fitch, Flower's Ltd., Gerry Foote, The Holman Ranch, Marj Hunsucker, Iron Kettle, Jeffrey's Grill and Catering.

The lists continues with: Joulilian Vineyards, Kasey's, Kate's Table, Ted Leidig, Jimmy Lyles, Mike Mottin, Oak Deli/Bird of Paradise Catering, Doug and Sarah Pease, Plaza Linda, Running Iron Restaurant, Mid Valley Safeway, Silver Spoon Catering, Sole Mio, Summerhouse Restaurant, Sweet Retreat, Taqueria del Valle, Leslie Voss, Thai Bistro, Sherry Thomas, Valley Lodge, Ventana Vineyards, Villagio, Cliff Washington, Chuck Woodsen.

Watts Valley Glass provided their shop area for food storage and staging and Stonepine Estate Resort was responsible for setting up the tent.

I speak for the sponsors, Friends of the Carmel Valley Library, when I say "THANK YOU" to all who participated.

SHERIFF'S Log

* A man on Via Los Rosas, Carmel Valley, reported four of his garden hoses slashed over the past two days. No known suspects.

* The manager of the Crossroads Safeway reported receiving some complaints about the action of petition circulators in front of the store.

* A man at Nepenthe, Big Sur, reported someone entered his house during the last 3 weeks and took 2 handguns. Other valuable items were untouched. No suspects.

Third Watch. Deputies: Meckel, Shaw, Kopicki, Hagn, Gardepie, Ragan, Warren, Deangelo.

* A man on Paseo Robles, Carmel Valley, heard a loud noise near his residence. Deputies conducted an area check but were unable to find anything.

* A driver was stopped at Hwy. 68 and Hwy. 1 for weaving in the roadway. A strong odor of marijuana led to a search of the vehicle which revealed a partial marijuana cigarette in the ash tray. The driver was cited and released.

2-18-96 First Watch. Deputies Banuelos, Duenas, Pellerin.

* A woman on Castro Cyn., Big Sur, reported that her ex-boyfriend had come over and refused to leave. He tore her phone off the wall and threw it down the mountain. She did not want to press charges unless he refused to leave. She requested that deputies give him a ride to Fernwood. He agreed and they did.

TOUCHING BASES

Peter Lyon

Tryouts are over, the cold wind of the draft has blown through upper Carmel Valley, coaches have made their calls, and now the Season begins, a season once again filled with all the promise, heartache, hilarity, and dreams that constitute our Little League, Baseball in Paradise.

While we wait for the fields to dry and the mitts to oil, we can reflect on what the new season may bring. Memory returns us to an earlier time. In 1984 we camped at the North Rim of the Grand Canyon. Our elder son, Jon, now playing baseball for Carmel High, had poked about in some Anasazi ruins and was fascinated by the approach of a blue-black thunderstorm across the colored cliffs.

Suddenly he turned to his Mom and with wonder, astonishment, and a whiff of exasperation inquired, "Why camping?" That resonant "why?" continues to haunt, particularly as it might apply to the Great American Pastime. Why baseball?

Why, indeed. Roger Angell's elegant essays aside, baseball is a most peculiar game, and we who live here in sundrenched paradise give it our own loving local twist. Let's take a look.

First, you need a pretty fair-sized piece of open, reasonably level land. Strategically placed trees, swift-flowing creeks, berms, swales and sandy pits are inimical to first class play and spoil an otherwise satisfactory location. And location we surely have: the CVLL Park boasts one of the most scenic venues in all of the Central Coast: sudden bluffs rising sharply behind a river lined with sycamores and willows, hawks in the summer air, an occasional whiff of the sea as the natural air-conditioner kicks in after lunch, and that wonderful deep light of the afternoons slanting across the fields.

Next, you need to remember that the land must be divided into two basic sections. First is the Place Where You Run Fast, called the infield. The infield is covered with some sort of nice colorful dirt which allows high speed running, dramatic sliding, and a fair bounce of the ball into the waiting glove. However, in spite of Pam Priano's heroic efforts with tractor, drag, and water hose, the infield also blows dust into the eyes of the players and spectators on windy spring afternoons.

The second section of the field is the Place Where You Run Slower, or Just Stand, and is called the outfield. It is covered by grass and is pocked by gopher holes. The exception to this description is found on tv, where baseball fields are either artificial and about as attractive as an astroturf mat in front of an RV squatting in the End 'o' Line Trailer Park in Roosterboot, Arkansas; or they appear as diamond cut emerald gems unfit for mere human cleats when viewed from some commercial blimp. Of course we have - as yet - no blimp, but thanks to the efforts of such as Jim Shakal and Gary Pennington, the CVLL Park boasts two excellent fields containing rich sod and minimal gopher riddling.

It is in those outfields that three players per inning spend a great deal of quiet time standing - or crouched with their hands on their knees - waiting for something to happen. In the first part of the season, when the ball seldom leaves the infield, those who serve by standing and waiting do a great deal of that, especially the right fielder, who has little to do unless a southpaw comes to bat.

Perhaps the right fielders could be issued gopher traps. It's a thought, Gary. (Of course, there is always the moment when the ball does indeed sail toward the outfield. Then a fielder may stand in silent awe, breaking a bit of a sweat, attempting to sort out, perhaps, the conflicting suggestions from the crowd; or may backpedal furiously until a foot finds a gopher hole and the hapless player bares his sole for all to witness.)

Of course, baseball requires not only a place; it requires participants. Down to the CVLL Park, the participants divide themselves, more or less neatly, into two different groups, the Players and the Spectators. (As we all know, the lines here do get blurred, but we are manifesting a perfect world at the moment.) Each team has from 12 (the majors) to 159 (tee-ball) players. On a reasonably normal day at Benny or Shakal Field, you will find 10 young folks on the field at any one time; the nine Serious Game Faces of the team on defense in the field, and one Very Serious Game Face worn by the batter of the moment.

This person, who is the only combatant actually armed with some sort of weapon, has a formidable task. First, though sorely tempted, he or she may not use the bat directly on any of the nine other opponents - nor on the umpire, who may loom large as an added enemy. Rather, the batter must stand several dozen feet from the pitcher or "hurler", who is making a valiant attempt to throw a very hard ball at warp speed past the batter in an area known as the "strike zone" determined by the distance between the batter's chest and knees. (Please note that this is precisely the location of one's anatomy containing the major vital organs.)

The batter is allowed to protect this vital area with the bat, and indeed is expected to hit the ball as far as possible, but not at any of the nine waiting opponents, and not into the snack bar, and certainly not into the rear window of Jon Siegel's car.

The batter may also engage in a kind of two way Dance of Chance with the pitcher and the umpire. But his dance is a tricky one: "Is that ball hittable? What do I think? What will the umpire think? Can I hit anything? Have I ever hit anything except the side of Dad's truck? Will the ball hit me? Will it hurt big time? What am I doing here, anyhow? Aauuuggghh! Why baseball?

No wonder that a sixty-five percent failure rate at bat gets you a zillion dollars a year and nomination to the Hall of Fame.

Next time: we'll look further at the game as played here, and give you some of the news rolling out of the Little League Board meetings.

The Carmel Valley Community Youth Center gratefully acknowledges a very generous gift of $500 from the good folks who bring you the Carmel Valley Ranchers' Days celebration each year. This money will be designated for use in the CVCYC's Swim Scholarship program, which annually makes funds available to Valley families seeking financial help with Community Pool sponsored swim lessons. Many thanks to the Valley Ranchers' Days Foundation.

Fling forwards...Spring back! Time again for the most excellent annual Tularcitos Parent Club sponsored Spring Fling, coming next month, Saturday the 16th of March, to a Hidden Valley Music Seminars building near you. This outstanding evening of great food, music and dance promises to be the best ever, with scrumptious food by Debbi Heron of Silverspoons Catering, and excellent live and silent auction prizes. All money raised will go towards supporting the on-going efforts of the Tularcitos Parent Club to bring extra special educational opportunities to the kids of Carmel Valley. For complete details or ticket info on the wonderful Spring Fling, call 659-2276.

There may be water in the river, snow on the hills and mud all over my dog's feet, but Spring will soon be in the air, and your friends at the Carmel Valley Garden Association are busy planning for their 29th annual Flower Show, taking place this year on Sunday, April 28, at Hidden Valley. The theme of the Garden Show this year will be "Ode to Spring". It is free to the public. The Association will be encouraging all backyard gardeners in the Valley to enter. Complete information, including entry forms and rules of the show will soon be available at local nurseries. For more info on the show or the Carmel Valley Garden Association, contact Sally Fargo at 659-5329 or Cel Allison at 626-4268.

Fling into Spring and slide into Summer. The winter ice may still be thick upon the Community Pool but our very own Coach Rick Simms, fearless leader of the Carmel Valley Otter Pups youth ice hockey team, is pleased to report the recent arrival of that long awaited pool slide, coming late this Spring to a community pool near you. Yes, the beautiful 12 foot long pool slide has finally arrived, and is just waiting for Coach "Fixx Whizz" Simms to assemble it.

(Uh...the coach would like it known that he is currently offering a substantial reward for the safe return of the pool slide assembly instructions...last seen blowing off the back of his truck...) Persons wishing to contribute alternate assembly plans are strongly encouraged to do so; any help at all would be greatly appreciated, and is, of course, completely tax deductible. The new pool slide is made possible by the many generous members, volunteers, and supporters of the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center.

Congrats to the "Friends of the Carmel Valley Library" for putting on an excellent, 2nd annual "Night at the Old Buckeye". The volunteers and organizers extend a big "thank you" to the hundreds of folks who came out two Saturday nights ago to enjoy an evening of live music and excellent food, donated by many local restaurants. The event raised over $4000 towards keeping the Carmel Valley Library open more days per month. Kudos to Dorothy McEwen, Barry Harrow, Ann Flood and all the other folks who made this outstanding event possible. Plans are in the works for the 3rd annual "Buckeye" event next year, and Barry has already indicated that he may offer his Mercedes as a raffle prize. Not!

Carmel Valley Road to get another stoplight

The construction work on the Carmel Valley Road Intersection Improvements at Rio Vista Drive and Carmel Middle School project at Mile Post 0.20 to Mile Post 0.77 started February 20th and is expected to be completed by April 1, 1996.

The work to be done consists of the installation of a traffic signal and road improvements.

All work will be performed both adjacent to and in the roadway. Minor traffic delays are possible.

The work will be performed by The Don Chapin, Co., Inc., of Salinas.

The project will cost approximately $241,300, according to County Public Works Director Gerald J. Gromko.

TULARCITOS PARENT CO-OP PRESCHOOL

Tularcitos Parent Co-op Preschool is now accepting applications for both the current and upcoming school years.

We believe that a child should view school as a positive social experience. Our children are encouraged to express themselves freely through many different types of media. Thus each child is able to learn at their own place.

Our goal is to maintain this type of learning atmosphere, allowing each child to be an individual. We believe that by offering these experiences, a child can learn with curiosity and confidence.

Norman Spaulding

One of the wonderful qualities in the greater Carmel Valley community is the diversity of backgrounds and intellect brought by the migrants to the Valley. Native residents, even those who have been here for 30 years or more, are rare and special.

The Valley thrives by a quiet spirit of strong individuality, freedom and privacy. At the same time, there is a powerful soul of neighborliness and a sense of our community power to bond together to do good works for the community.

For some this may be picking up trash as they walk along the roadways and pathways. For others it is hours given to volunteer public safety work. For others it is volunteering for one of our numerous public service or community service organizations. Some work with schools, artists, ranchers, seniors. Some contribute by making donations, small and large, to various projects and community needs.

During last year's floods, other areas threw temper tantrums demanding public services. Carmel Valley folks rolled up their sleeves and went to work, from Cachagua to the mouth of the Valley. People helped people they had never known. People who had fought fierce political or personal battles in the past shared food, shelter and human sweat.

The spirit of the Valley was alive when Hidden Valley Music Seminar donated their facility for The Sun's Flood Relief Fundraiser. Musicians, restaurants and organizers donated to the event and over $25,000 was raised to provide immediate relief for flood victims.

This is a community with a magnificence of spirit as great as the mountains that rise around us.

Proudly, the Valley is a place where the rich may live next door to the less affluent; the young welder and his family next to the aged, divorced poet; the corporate mogul next to a struggling rancher; the horse breeder next to a computer programmer.

While the average household income in the Valley is higher than Pebble Beach, the feeling of the community is more inclusive and less pretentious. If Pebble Beach is the land of sport utility vehicles, mint condition Mercedes-Benzs, and polo ponies; the Valley is the home of American pick-ups, Cadillacs, station wagons and Ranchers Days.

The perpetuation of the glorious spirit of the Valley depends in part on the age-old dictum - you never turn away a volunteer. When someone wants to help or pursue an interest, the Valley has always had a way of including that person and informally guiding him or her toward a way to contribute. There has always been a path to contribute to the community for the esteemed and even those who seem a little off-track. For the "off-track" the community has consistently had the patience to include and guide, rather than exclude.

Functioning through a loose-knit body of volunteer groups and a handful of special districts and agencies, the Valley functions quite well, without the expense or nuisance of local government.

Any effort to take away the spirit of the Valley, through the exercise of exclusivity or exclusion, may seem to resolve some short-term conflict or unpleasantness but the real impact is to tear at the very fabric that makes the Valley special.

No matter how great your anger or frustration, no matter how justified you may feel; let us continue to be inclusive and solve our problems amongst ourselves.

Community organizations absent of inclusion and participation become empty platforms. We need more members in all of these groups: The Chamber of Commerce, the Tularcitos PTA, the Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee, the Carmel Valley Property Owners' Association; the Mid-Valley Fire District, Carmel Valley Fire District, Carmel Valley Recreation and Park District.

The issue is not who gets the glory and responsibility of serving as an officer. The issue is how many people are participating and what is the organization doing to include people and perpetuate the glorious spirit of the Valley.

LETTERS to the Editor

The Saga of the Cox Goat Dairy Continues...

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

I sure don't know who this Dwayne Smith is, but he seems to be misinformed. It sure doesn't seem he was interested in pointing out a different point of view but only in trying to discredit parties involved. With what seemed to me a lot of unknowledgeable comments. It is pretty commonplace out here for wires to be run through trees in place of poles. I know of homes that have passed inspections with this in existence, and many people share wells out here. Seems to me you don't know what is legal or not. I know the Tegtmeiers have been through all these inspections and have passed. As for your comments on marijuana and any of the people in our area. I think Cachagua has taken a bum rap long enough without your bringing up things of the past that doesn't have anything to do with the situation at hand.

Women's Club Will Award December Prizes

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

The February meeting of the Carmel Valley Women's Club was a great success. Our Silent Auction was very well supported by our members and local businesses. We are grateful to all who donated to it. Thanks to all.

We also showed excerpts of "Die Fledermaus" by Johann Strauss which was enjoyed by those members who stayed in spite of adverse conditions with the tv.

The next meeting will be on March 3 at St. Dunstan's Church Hall. It will be a potluck luncheon with a card and game party following. Make up your own table or call our Membership Chairman, Sally Fargo, at 659-5329 to help you. It's a great way to meet people if you are a newcomer to Carmel Valley.

At this meeting we will award prizes to the winners of our December "Play and Pay" game.

Says The Sun is Biased Toward RSC Developers

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Most of the letters you have printed that are for the Rancho San Carlos Development read very much alike. They stress that Rancho San Carlos has devoted almost six years to the process of getting approval for their business venture. They do not mention that Rancho San Carlos has spent $50 million to get this project passed by the county. That's only $20 million less than they paid for the land.

If we are able to obtain the necessary signatures on the Referendum Petition which protests the reclassifying of zoning for Rancho San Carlos, this issue will return to the Board of Supervisors where they may rescind their decision. If they do not it will be placed on a ballot to be voted on by the general electorate of Monterey County. If this happens, I believe the next developer will think long and hard before deciding to try to make money on our land. And when your grandchildren ask you how we saved this place, you can tell them we just wouldn't let it happen.

Petitioners Close in on 9000 Against RSC Plan

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Attached is a list of reasons detailing why voters are opposed to the San Carlos Ranch development, and why they are trying to collect over 9000 signatures protesting the Monterey County Board of Supervisors' decision to reclassify certain properties in order to facilitate the approval of the Rancho San Carlos subdivision.

If the board refuses to reconsider its decision to reclassify, the issue can then be put to the vote of the people. It would be a first in Monterey's history in over 100 years. It is a grass roots movement of great significance.

No amount of carrots or candy offered voters, or how beautiful a plan this may be, adding 30,000 people to a wilderness area in Carmel Valley is intolerable. Anything this big should be decided by the voters, not the board which will pass anything.

The public should know that the San Carlos Ranch employees have appeared every day since petitioners have asked for signers, to interfere, harass, and intimidate both signers and petitioners. The San Carlos people have the right to give out information to anyone, but they only come where there are petitioners, to offer their literature and interfere with a civil right process. They do not take up positions alone nor do they identify themselves verbally or with badges.

Police have been called several times. Once, to stop one employee from following a petitioner through Monterey in his car. Another was observed sitting in his car waiting for a petitioner to appear.

Interfering with a citizen's right of petition is punishable by a $5000 fine and/or up to 16 months in the state prison or 2 to 3 years in county jail as explained by the police. If the San Carlos people will stoop this low with subversive action and gorilla tactics, what will they do next? It all boggles the mind.

Stay tuned.

RSC & Robinson Cyn. Road

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Good-bye Robinson Canyon Road.

With the Supervisor's approval of the plans for Rancho San Carlos, you can now say goodbye to the pleasures of driving scenic, upper Robinson Canyon Road.

The County has allowed the developers to place dozens of housing units within a few hundred feet of it, an entire town in plain view of it, a hotel and golf course right next to it, and 21 gated crossings on it. No bridge was required to eliminate cross traffic as pleaded for by residents served by the road.

Also in plain view will be a heavy equipment yard, sewage plant, settlement ponds, equestrian center, parking for close to 400 cars, 219,000 square feet of commercial and visitors serving buildings including a 40 unit "boutique" lodge, two recreational centers and athletic field, etc., etc.

The developers have cleverly kept those facilities away from their "private" Rancho San Carlos Road. They have totally disregarded our County's residents, and placed all of these structures on the scenic, public Robinson Canyon Road viewshed. This makes one ponder what is to come next. Wildflower, bird, and wildlife viewing will become a memory of the past. Thanks a lot Supervisors.

I strongly advise registered voters to sign the petition to get this issue on the ballot.

Just What is a Preserve? Is it Public or Private?

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

County needs a dictionary.

If it's true, County Counsel has stated there is no exact definition of clustering or what constitutes a Preserve. What authority does Counsel have to have his own determination of these terms? In relation to Rancho San Carlos "preserve" and "clustering", Counsel okayed to the Supervisors a cluster that can have houses scattered on buildable terrain over the entire 20,000 acres. This is a "shotgun". The developer calls it "colander". Counsel agrees with the developers.

A Preserve is an area that is left for nature with only trails for people. The developers place roads, estate housing, fences, back yards, golf course, etc. on the land and call it a Preserve. Counsel again agrees with the developers.

I knew the peninsula was in trouble when Counsel referred to the development as "our plan" at the

VALLEY FINANCE

Douglas Pease

I'm a crossword nut, and I store new words of seven letters or less in my arsenal in case of a challenge to a killer game of Scrabble. I also read the quarterly earnings reports in the San Jose newspaper, in part because of my business, in part because of the words. Friday's paper reported 185% improvement in annual revenues for, "A leading supplier of open-architecture and vendor-independent design planning tools for deep submicron gate-array and cell-based integrated circuit design." Jules Verne eat your heart out.

Another company "Makes field emission displays," and another "Develops genomic database products and services." (Aha! "Genomic" is seven letters.)

These new words are here to stay. Silicon Valley companies reported in the San Jose newspaper from the Pacific Stock Exchange High-Tech index, which finished up 57.30% for the 12 months ended November 30, 1995. In contrast, the Standard and Poor 500 index finished up 36.95% for the same period. One might say "Technology Growth" stocks enjoyed superior growth last year, and one wonders if it will continue. The fund manager for a certain Technology mutual fund thinks the pace will continue, as technological innovation serves to expand existing markets and create new ones. Think about cellular phones, video conferencing and video games, CD-ROMS for personal computers, two-way paging, direct broadcast tv, digital cameras, credit card readers and the Internet (drat...eight letters).

Technological innovation is sneaky; our cars now contain more electronics than steel, on a dollar for dollar cost basis.

What's next? Movies on demand, satellite navigation for autos, speech recognition gadgets, electronic commerce, PC video and much wider use of the Internet by you, me, and businesses.

All this means continuing improvements in technologies, in computer literacy, and in global emerging markets. Brand new companies will become part of our daily lives. 3Com, Cisco Systems, Microsoft, Dell, Oracle and Silicon Graphics have been public companies less than ten years and we cannot imagine life without their products and services. We may not understand exactly what they do, but we have Windows and Star Wars movies and computer networks because of them. There were only a dozen such companies in the 1970s, hundreds by the 1980s, and thousands today. Some will prove to be amazing investments, and it is worth doing your homework to find them.

Did you know you can get the New York Times crossword every day on the Internet? Oh frabjous (seven letters, do you buy it?) joy.

The First Swipe at Jeff Davi

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Let's not fool ourselves about Jeff Davi:

The reason he has so easily collected such an obscene amount of campaign money from all over the state is that his supporters still haven't given up the hope of making a killing off the resources and environment of the Monterey Peninsula and the Big Sur Coast.

I don't believe the Fifth District should go to the highest bidder.

I am supporting the only supervisorial candidate who has the maturity, experience and proven track record of governing, balancing and protecting our dwindling resources: Monterey City Council member David Potter.

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Should you buy a computer?

I have read numerous sales propaganda articles on this theme that try to persuade you that computers are very easy to learn and run. This is exactly the same as telling somebody that they can "speak a foreign language like a native" in 20 easy lessons. Undoubtedly the writer of that expression would defend it by saying that you can learn to speak, say 20, phrases in 20 lessons. But that won't get anybody very far. The analogy between learning computers and learning a foreign language is, I believe, an excellent one. The computer field has a language and culture of its own. How about: RAM, ROM, IRQ, CMOS, BIOS, IDE, SCSI...and thousands more such words.

In my experience the computer is probably THE most effective tool for exploding egos. It can bring a person with a large ego to tears in a short time and frequently such a person will shy away from them thereafter. The qualities it takes to really, really learn computers are pretty much the same as those required to learn a foreign language: patience, persistence and dedication. "Fixing" computers is no more difficult than fixing cars and is much more pleasant. People who enjoy challenges are most likely to be the ones who will enjoy computers. The greatest argument for buying a computer is that it is the communications tool of the future.

If the computer is carefully set up and some tuition obtained, I believe that with some effort the vast majority of people are capable of learning to do simple word processing, faxing, connecting to bbs, connecting to the Internet...At the beginning, cards with the basic instructions for each operation would be made up and in time the operations would become second nature and the cards superfluous. Instructions would also be needed to cover some unusual circumstances, e.g., when the computer "crashed" or "hung up", when it responds to no command at all. Above all the user should not tamper with any settings until they become familiar. It takes very little "fiddling" to make it behave erratically or not work at all. Stick to the given instructions and you would probably have a computer that performs with very few problems for many years. Attending an introductory class in computers is very advisable and be prepared, at least at first, to spend quite a bit of time learning.

I have heard of parents in their 60s and 70s who were given computers by their offspring and had their lives revolutionized. Typically they started with a little word processing and e-mail on a computer already set up, and then went on from there to keeping their accounts, faxing, exploring the Internet, and soon will be able to talk with cousin Bob in Australia at 10 cents/hour on the Internet.

So it all boils down to the kind of person you are. It could mean an exciting and absorbing new interest that will give you lifelong pleasure or a piece of junk in your closet because it decorated the walls with your ego. If you do decide to buy a computer make sure that you have toll-free phone calls for technical support. Very long waits are normal and paying 20 cents/minute for listening to Musak will do wonders for your long distance carrier but not for you. Another caveat - be sure to use a credit card to buy it.

In the next part we will start an introduction to computers.

an argument that escalated into punches being thrown. They all suffered minor injuries. All three parties are related and declined to prosecute.

2-23-96 Second Watch. Deputies: Duval, Cassara, Grover, Stevens, Kopicki.

* Lillian Bindas, of Saddle Rd., Monterey, reported her husband Robert left home a week ago after an argument and hasn't returned. Statewide BOL issued.

* Marian Fickwirth, of Flanders Dr., Carmel, reported a number of suspicious phone calls received at her house.

* Wendy Gleason, of Valdez Rd., Pebble Beach, reported that two of her personal checks were forged in her name. She suspects her former room mate.

* Jeff Kellogg of Valley Way, Carmel, reported annoying phone calls left on his answering machine by Lori Colleto, his ex-girlfriend.

Third Watch. Deputies: Ragan, Shaw, Gardepie, DeAngelo.

* County Mental Health Worker P. Martinez requested a welfare check on Laura Ruha on Glen Pl. She was o.k.

* O. K. Bigelow, 84, of Rio Road, reported a transient camp behind Arroyo Carmel. The camp was unoccupied and was west of Arroyo Carmel property.

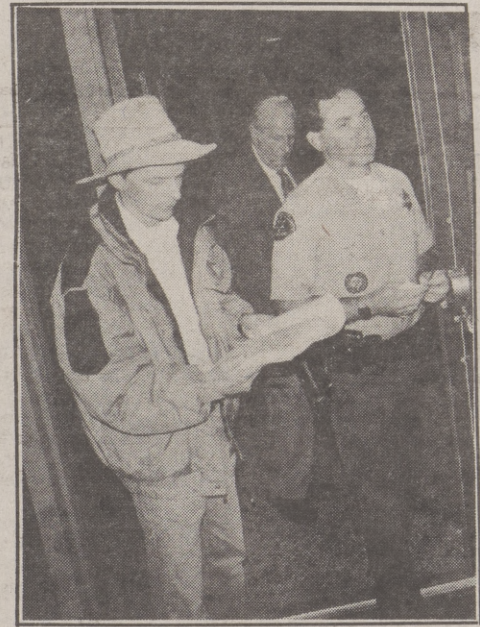

* Michael Dougherty, of Carmel Hills Drive, reported that Lincoln Statler brandished a gun at him at the residence on 2-13-96.

DAVI: Davi said he supported the project but is concerned about the proposed traffic light and the possibility of insufficient water.

POTTER: Potter said he was concerned about open space and water. Potter added that there should be an underpass, not a traffic light, at the intersection with the Valley Road.

HENSON: Henson said he would have voted no on the current Rancho San Carlos project. Henson said he would have met with them earlier and required clustered development and required them to actually prove the water supply, adding that he may still have that opportunity in light of the lawsuits and referendum. Henson said that while they call it a preserve, there are actually only 2,000 of 20,000 acres that are 1,000 feet away from man made improvements.

Why am I not given an opportunity to vote on major developments?

- Darby Worth, CVPOA member.

POTTER: "I think the one reason you elect an official is to represent you."

DAVI: Davi said in matters of private property you have your voice heard through your Supervisor.

HENSON: Henson said the Master Plan is where the future of the community is made adding that he would like to give citizens the opportunity to vote on their area Master Plan.

The Carmel Valley Road Improvement Committee's (CVRIC) report included a recommendation requiring major road improvements on Carmel Valley Road before approval of additional development projects. Why has this report not been implemented?

- Dr. Flip, CVPOA Director.

HENSON: Henson said he founded the committee and would incorporate the report, which found residents do not want four-laning, with the CVPOA's effort to revise the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

POTTER: "I am not interested in seeing four-laning or more subdivisions."

DAVI: "I do not support four-laning or traffic lights." Davi said he didn't

Candidates Q & A

support a public vote on Master Plans because projects should be considered individually.

Comment on the Public Works department's zeal for traffic lights and the very expensive County Council.
- Patricia Bernardi, CVPOA Director.

DAVI: Davi said the county budgets $5 million for "risk management" which pays for litigious activities which is too much. Davi said that Public Works is essentially run by the Supervisors and "If the Public Works Director wants stoplights and the people don't want stoplights, we are not going to have stoplights."

POTTER: "You need an elected official that stands up and says you work for me, you are accountable to me and you do what you're told." Potter said that bureaucrats try to tell elected officials how to do their job.

HENSON: "In relation to County Council, it would be advantageous for you to elect an attorney who can challenge County Council's decisions."

What is your opinion on the Pebble Beach lot program?

- Robin Williams, audience member.

HENSON: "Basically, I am opposed to it, I am opposed to another golf course in the Del Monte Forest." Henson said he would like residents to be able to vote on the plan.

DAVI: "I would like to explore it." Davi said it is irresponsible to have a defined position because all of the information is not yet available.

POTTER: "It is in preliminary review." Potter said he had concerns about traffic on 68, the stable relocation and the location of housing in Pescadero Canyon.

"Just because the dog likes your cooking doesn't mean you're a good cook. She likes toilet water, too!"
